You must disclose all arrests and charges, even if the arrest occurred when you were a minor. An adjudication of juvenile delinquency is not a "conviction" under U.S. immigration law, but a juvenile can be charged as an adult for an offense committed while a juvenile. If you were convicted as an adult, there is a conviction, regardless of whether you were tried before a criminal court or a juvenile court. An adjudication of juvenile delinquency could also be relevant to the exercise of discretion. If you claim that an arrest resulted in adjudication of delinquency, and not in a conviction, you must submit a copy of the court document that establishes this fact. You do not need to submit documentation relating to traffic fines and incidents that did not involve an actual physical arrest if the penalty was only a fine of less than $500 or points on your driver's license. However, you must submit such documentation if the traffic incident resulted in criminal charges or involved alcohol, drugs, or injury to a person or property.

Public Charge

Are you subject to the public charge ground of inadmissibility under INA section 212 (a) (4)? If you are applying for adjustment of status as an employment-based, family-based, or diversity visa applicant, please answer yes. ☐ Yes ☐ No

*This question is required. The public charge law always applies to employment-based, family-based and diversity visa green card applicants. For that reason, if you are an employment-based, family-based, or diversity visa green card applicant, you must select "Yes" and answer the subsequent questions to the best of your ability. Although the wording of question may be confusing, the question is not intended to ask whether the applicant is a public charge (has received public benefits); rather, the question is asking whether the applicant is "subject to" (i.e., required to satisfy) the law.
